What Is Healing Roots Home Visiting Program?

Our mission is to give parents the education, tools, and community resources necessary to promote optimal early childhood development and strengthen families with trauma-informed and professionally trained Parent Educators.

Staff prepare personally formatted lessons and activities for each family that is served. Visits are conducted at home, by phone, and virtually.

The program aims to reduce isolation, broaden social support, and make families aware of the community resources available to them. The goal is to move the family toward a healthy and strong home environment in which the children will flourish.

This Program May Help A Family In The Following Ways:

Fun family activities and play groups offered throughout each year

Collaborating with community resources and referral assistance

Positive parent in-home support & Education about Child development & safety

Support in life skills, self care and building connections with families

What Curriculum Is Used?

Healing Roots uses Parents As Teachers also known as PAT. "A research-based and evidence-informed curriculum that empowers parents through aims to increase parent knowledge of early childhood development; improve positive parenting practices; provide early detection of developmental delays and connection to services; improve parent, child, and family health and well-being; increase children's school readiness and school success."
